IFPN Position Statement Code of Ethics

Preamble

Perioperative nurses have four fundamental responsibilities: to promote health, to prevent illness, to restore health and to alleviate suffering. The need for perioperative nursing is universal.

Inherent in nursing is respect for human rights, including the right to life, to dignity and to be treated with respect.

Perioperative nursing care is unrestricted by considerations of age, colour, creed, culture, disability or illness, gender, nationality, politics, race or social status.

Perioperative nurses render health services to the individual, the family and the community and co-ordinate their services with those of related groups.

Elements of the Code

1. Perioperative nurses and people

The perioperative nurse's primary professional responsibility is to people requiring their nursing care. In providing care, the perioperative nurse promotes an environment in which the human rights, values, customs and spiritual beliefs of the individual, family and community are respected. The perioperative nurse ensures that the individual receives sufficient information on which to base consent for care and related treatment. The perioperative nurse holds in confidence personal information and uses judgement in sharing this information. The perioperative nurse shares with society the responsibility for initiating and supporting action to meet the health and social needs of the public, in particular those of vulnerable populations. The perioperative nurse also shares responsibility to sustain and protect the natural environment from depletion, pollution, degradation and destruction.

2. Perioperative nurses and practice

The perioperative nurse carries personal responsibility and accountability for their nursing practice, and for maintaining competence by continual learning. The perioperative nurse maintains a standard of personal health such that the ability to provide care is not compromised. The perioperative nurse uses judgement regarding individual competence when accepting and delegating responsibility. The perioperative nurse at all times maintains standards of personal conduct which reflect well on the profession and enhance public confidence. The perioperative nurse, in providing care, ensures that use of technology and scientific advances are compatible with the safety, dignity and rights of people.

3. Perioperative nurses and the profession

The perioperative nurse assumes the major role in determining and implementing acceptable standards of clinical perioperative nursing practice, management, research and education. The perioperative nurse is active in developing a core of research-based professional knowledge. The perioperative nurse, acting through the professional organisation, participates in creating and maintaining equitable social and economic working conditions in nursing.

4. Perioperative nurses and co-workers

The perioperative nurse sustains a co-operative relationship with co-workers in nursing and other fields. The perioperative nurse takes appropriate action to safeguard individuals when a co-worker or any other person endangers their care.

The IFPN Code of Ethics for Nurses is a guide for action based on social values and needs. It will have meaning only as a living document if applied to the realities of perioperative nursing and health care in a changing society and within the many cultural norms around the world. To achieve its purpose the Code must be understood, internalised and used by perioperative nurses in all aspects of their work. It must be available to students and perioperative nurses throughout their study and working lives.

Advice to nurses

- Study the standards under each element of the Code.
- Reflect on what each standard means to you. Think about how you can apply ethics in your nursing domain: perioperative practice, education, research or management.
- Discuss the Code with co-workers and others.
- Use a specific example from experience to identify ethical dilemmas and standards of conduct as outlined in the Code. Identify how you would resolve the dilemma.
- Work in groups to clarify ethical decision-making and reach a consensus on standards of ethical conduct.
- Collaborate with your national perioperative nurses' association, co-workers, and others in the continuous application of ethical standards in nursing practice, education, management and research.

Dissemination of the IFPN Code of Ethics for Nurses

To be effective the IFPN Code of Ethics for Nurses must be familiar to perioperative nurses. We encourage you to help with its dissemination to schools of nursing, practising perioperative and other speciality nurses, the nursing press and other mass media. The Code should also be disseminated to other health professions, the general public, consumer and policy-making groups, human rights organisations and employers of nurses.

Glossary of terms used in the ICN Code of Ethics for Nurses

Co-operative relationship. A professional relationship based on collegial and reciprocal actions, and behaviour that aim to achieve certain goals.

Co-worker. Other nurses and other health and non-health related workers and professionals.

Nurse shares with society. A nurse, as a health professional and a citizen, initiates and supports appropriate action to meet the health and social needs of the public.

Perioperative. Care of the patients around the surgical intervention, for example anaesthetic, operating room and post-anaesthesia along with those who may perform surgery in a different setting

Personal health. Mental, physical, social and spiritual wellbeing of the nurse.

Personal information. Information obtained during professional contact that is private to an individual or family, and which, when disclosed, may violate the right to privacy, cause inconvenience, embarrassment, or harm to the individual or family.

Related groups. Other nurses, health care workers or other professionals providing service to an individual, family or community and working toward desired goals.
